Mexico City, January 24.—Senator Francisco Field Jurado was shot dead yesterday by a group of unknown assailants while near his home in the heart of the city. This is believed to be the first sign of "direct action" threatened by the labor elements against those in sympathy with the rebel movement.

Two senators and two deputies were abducted shortly after the shooting by unknown persons, supposed to have been the same ones who shot Jurado.

The senate held an extraofficial session protesting against the assassination and demanding guarantees for safety of their members.

Washington, January 24.—Tension over the Mexican situation appeared to have been completely relaxed today when the state department announced that American war vessels ordered to Vera Cruz and Tampico were already in process of being withdrawn from Mexican waters since the rebel leaders had abandoned their attempted blockade of Tampico.

With this compliance with the demands of the Washington government the De la Huerta leaders have withdrawn all threats against the continued movement of peaceful American commerce, and the occasion for sending the ships has passed.

Unless American lives and property should again be jeopardized, it is unlikely that the Washington government will take any further action than to continue to make sales of war munitions to Obregon. Secretary Weeks approved today the sale of an odd lot of spare parts for airplanes and a number of bombs.

Consul Wood reported from Vera Cruz today that De la Huerta had ordered that ample guarantees be extended for protection of American lives and property in the region about Tampico, and that the oil industry be permitted to resume operations. A message from Tampico later said the oil companies actually had been granted such permission.

Anniston, Ala., January 24.—(Special.)—J. Fowler is said to have been shooting. One of the shots broke Pope's left arm and the other entered his abdomen. He is not expected to recover.

BRITAIN'S THRONE

Sweeping Changes in Pol-

Republic.

BY CHARLES McCANN.

London, January 24.—As the smoke of political battle fades and Premier MacDonald's labor ministry begins to function, one fact stands out clearly among estimates of results of labor's rise to control of the British government.

King George retains his firm position in the British state. Labor is in Downing street, where it probably dreams of sweeping changes in British policy. But these changes will not invade the throne.

Intellectuals among labor party men, some of them as prominent in the party councils as they are in print, occasionally wave the republican flag, accompanied by cheers from Scottish laborers.

But among the biggest leaders of the labor party, and among the people who vote labor's ticket, there is no sign of hostility to the monarchy.

Republican talk, and other wild talk here, is based entirely on a series of hypotheses which assume that the king himself—a monarch, acting always by advice of whatever ministers are in power—will unite to "suppress" labor.

Republic Means Break-Up.
Some radical laborites urge that if such an attempt at suppression is made, labor should move for the proclamation of a republic.

In assaying the value of republican talk there are three factors to be considered:

1. The labor party has 192 of the Washington, January 24.—An amazing story of how he loaned $100,000 to Albert B. Fall, then secretary of the interior, out of sympathy for an old buddy came upon hard times, and a year later obtained through Fall's department an oil contract which he frankly estimated would net him $100,000,000 in profits, was laid before the senate Teapot Dome investigating committee Thursday by E. L. Doheny, the California oil magnate.

This disclosure produced a sensation, the like of which has seldom been experienced here, coming as it did just ahead of the arrival of former Secretary Fall, who had been summoned to tell the truth about the loan after offering two conflicting stories previously.

It is expected to result not only in the cancellation of the Teapot Dome lease but in the breaking of the California contracts held by Doheny. In fact, the major work of Fall's administration, so far as oil lands are concerned, will now be scrutinized with a microscope, and no one is willing at this time to say where it will all end. Department of justice representatives took notes on Doheny's testimony.

His Only Friend.

"I am just an impetuous, imprudent old prospector, and I loaned the money to an old friend just as most individuals would lend $20 or $50 out of sympathy," Doheny said. "I felt that I was Fall's only friend who had money which could be spared. It meant nothing to me and came out of my personal funds."

But the senators were not inclined to take such a simple view of the transaction. By plying Doheny with questions, they brought out the full story of the loan, including how Fall had dropped the hint to Doheny that he had lost his rich holdings in Mexico and was nearly broke, how Doheny offered him $100,000 on the spot, how Fall a few days later telephoned Doheny at New York that he would accept the loan, how Doheny cashed a check at his bank and sent his son to Washington with the $100,000 in a little black satchel and returned with Fall's note.

MR. AND MRS. REMUS TO LIVE APART IN ATLANTA

Cincinnati, January 24.—(Special.) Attired in a natty suit of pearl gray with hat and overcoat to match and with several large diamonds valued at thousands of dollars flashing from necktie and hand, George Remus, millionaire convicted "bootlegger" king, called on officials of the government building in this city.

He sought to delay his trip to the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., where he will serve a two-year term. He asked for a week's stay of extension to enable him to complete his income tax report to the government.

He learned that it might be possible to delay the trip for a week but that he would have to remain in the county jail.

So Remus decided he would go to Atlanta tonight with the rest of his eleven wealthy associates whom he referred to as "his boys." Remus said he had expected a reprieve in view of the fact that he might get executive clemency soon.

He said he had his extensive distillery and wholesale drug business affairs in such shape that he will suffer little financial loss during his absence. He was in good shape, and joked about his "winter in the south." "I always had hoped to pass a winter in Atlanta and the south if I ever got

Mrs. Hughes Is Fifth Woman Doomed
To Hang in Georgia Criminal History

RECORDS SHOW ONLY TWO WHITE WOMEN HAVE BEEN HANGED IN STATE

Mrs. Ida Hughes, condemned slayer of her aged mother-in-law, will today be the fifth white woman in the history of Georgia to receive the grim verdict of death on the scaffold.

Should the sentence be carried into execution, she will be the third white woman in criminal annals of the state to pay the supreme penalty for murder.

Of the four women who have been condemned to death, two have been convicted and sentenced in Fulton superior courts within the past two years. Prior to that time, no white woman in Georgia had incurred the death penalty since days prior to the civil war.

Records of The Constitution show that in the entire criminal history of Georgia, only two white women have been hanged. They were Mrs. Polly Barclay, of Wilkes county, who met death sometime between 1830 and 1850 for the murder of her husband, and Susan Eberhart, of Webster county, who paid with her life for conspiring with a man named Spann to kill his wife. The two choked the woman to death, and the Eberhart woman was hanged just prior to the civil war.

Another case of a white woman in Georgia, who has heard the dread sentence, is Mrs. Cora Lou Vinson, of Atlanta, who, on March 30, 1922, drove in a taxicab to the Marietta street drug store of her husband, Dr. W. D. Vinson, and shot him to death in broad daylight.

Mrs. Vinson came to trial in May, 1922, and on June 4 of the same year was found guilty without recommendation. She was sentenced to hang on July 28, 1922, by Judge John D. Humphries.

A peculiar feature in connection with the Vinson case was that Solicitor General John A. Boykin and Assistant Solicitor Ed Stephens did not ask the death penalty. Solicitor Boykin stated to the jury that he "had never asked that a woman be hanged and would not do so in this case" despite his belief that the crime was cold-blooded and premeditated.

Despite this fact, however, the jury returned a verdict of first degree murder, ignoring Mrs. Vinson's claim that her husband had cruelly mistreated her for 19 years, that he had made her a dope fiend and had caused her to contract a social disease, and that he had made her the victim of malpractice on five occasions.

Records are also available to show that at the beginning of the civil war a negro woman was executed by law in Marietta, Cobb county, but details of the case are not at hand.

Records of the testimony even the court itself when he described an amazing series of personal gifts, totaling $25,000, which he said were donated to him by a mysterious stranger named John T. King while he was head of the Maryland Anti-Saloon league in 1912 and 1913.

Came From Nowhere.
This angle of the testimony came out just before court was adjourned late Thursday until Friday. It is now believed that the case will get to the jury Friday night.

Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora was questioning Anderson as to how he had been able to lend the Anti-Saloon league more than $20,000.

King appeared in Anderson's office one day as mysteriously as he later disappeared, Anderson said.

"He came in suddenly and praised my work," Anderson explained. "He said, 'You're a fool to be working for this league for $4,000 a year. But I sympathize with your work and I'm going to make a little investment of $1,000 for you.'"

That was all right, the dry chief assured King, and in some way, King handled this little thousand-dollar account until some time in 1913, when it had grown to a great oak of $25,000. Then "King" vanished and Anderson never saw him again.

Court in Uproar.
The courtroom was so surprised at this story that it went into an uproar. Judge Tompkins had to rap continuously for order.

Anderson said he felt not only justified, but quite pleased, in taking the $25,000 as a personal gift. He described King as about 45 years old.

New York, January 24.—Facts and figures on the "profits of prohibition" poured forth from the trial of William H. Anderson as the New York Anti-Saloon league chief took the witness stand in defense against charges of forgery involving his manipulation of the league's finances.

"Wet" organizations, politicians and others learned something they had been highly curious about for a long time, when Anderson freely admitted Thursday that since 1914, when he first assumed his present position, approximately $2,000,000 had been collected and expended by his organization to further the cause of prohibition.

The dry leader started even the court itself when he described an amazing series of personal gifts, totaling $25,000, which he said were donated to him by a mysterious stranger named John T. King while he was head of the Maryland Anti-Saloon league in 1912 and 1913.

WOMAN'S ABSENT

IGNORANT OF FATE

Jury Returns Verdict
Without Recommendation of Mercy After Deliberating Three Hours.

INDICTED HUSBAND
QUAILS AT SENTENCE

Heated Argument Marks
Close of Trial of Woman
for Slaying Mother-in-Law.

Mrs. Ida Hughes, Thursday night, at 10 o'clock, was found guilty of murder in the first degree in the slaying of her mother-in-law, Mrs. M. C. Hughes, by a Fulton county jury after it had deliberated three hours. The verdict automatically carries the death penalty, as the jury made no recommendation for mercy to the court.

Mrs. Hughes will not be apprised of the outcome of her case until this morning at 9 o'clock, when sentence will be imposed by Judge G. H. Howard, before whom she had been on trial since Wednesday morning.

Frank Hughes, her husband, who was jointly indicted in connection with his aged mother's death at the hands of his wife Sunday afternoon, December 30, was present at the reading. He trembled noticeably and his face assumed a ghastly pallor as he read in silence after Assistant Solicitor Ed A. Stephens the decision that will send his wife to die on the gallows for the murder of his mother.

Few Are Present.

Only a few court officials were present. Hughes was represented by Attorney E. A. Allen, counsel for the defense, and Mr. Stephens represented the state.

Sentence was not imposed following an agreement of counsel that the verdict be read despite the absence of Judge Howard, who was forced to retire on account of illness.

Mrs. Hughes sat in an adjoining chamber of the courtroom—tears in her eyes for the first time since the hour her trial began.

Sheriff Lowry refused to allow a Constitution reporter an interview with Mrs. Hughes, after she had been removed to her cell in the tower, and upon Hughes' announcement that he would not talk to anyone, reporters were denied admittance to his cell.

Hughes' Trial Soon.

According to Solicitor John A. Boykin, Frank Hughes will be brought to trial immediately for his part in the slaying of Mrs. M. C. Hughes.

The jury received the case at 5:30 o'clock and was granted a two hours' recess for the evening meal at 6:30. At 8:30 it resumed deliberations.

Mrs. Hughes held one arm about Clarence, 14-year-old son by a former marriage of Frank Hughes, her husband, who was jointly indicted in connection with his mother's death. She remained imperturbed and composed—almost indifferent, as jurors heard the charge of Judge Howard and solemnly filed out of the courtroom to determine whether she should go free, be imprisoned, or die upon the gallows.

Acquittal on contention that the search made in Mrs. Ida Hughes' home in Egan Park by two Hapeville policemen and the dead woman was illegal, was asked by Attorney H. A. Allen in the closing argument of the trial.

Pleads for "Hope."
Solicitor Boykin preceded Mr. Allen in the final argument for the jury to hang Mrs. Hughes—"the cold-blooded murderer." Vigorous denunciation by the solicitor had no outward effect on the defendant. She kept her eyes trained on Mr. Boykin as he pleaded for the "hope" as penance for the cold-blooded murder of "Mother" Hughes.

Attorney Allen declared that Mrs. Hughes had shown in her testimony Wednesday that the elder Mrs. Hughes had threatened her and that she was in fear of personal violence. He outlined to the jurors a story of a drunken party at the dead woman's home the night before the shooting, declaring that Clarence had come to his stepmother with news that his grandmother had sworn to kill her.

The two Hapeville officers were entirely without authority when they allowed the search of Mrs. Hughes' home, Mr. Allen declared, "and this with threats against her life gave her cause to act as she did."

"She was acting in defense of her home—the sacred right to which she was entitled—and was protecting herself when she fired that shot. And yet the state's counsel asks you to hang this woman. Has the time come, gentlemen, when a person must be hanged for protecting home or life? If so, justice has fled the earth."

The defense contended that the search was nothing less than a robbery, declaring that Mrs. Hughes would have had a legal right to have killed the two officers who accompanied her mother-in-law.

Solicitor Boykin and his assistant, John Hudson, made strong arguments for the death penalty.

Solicitor Cautious.
"Cast aside this sick sentimentality that saves the petticoat murderers from the gallows," the solicitor declared to the jury. "This woman is almost as bad as the ghoul who digs up a dead body. She talked to you gentlemen yesterday for an hour and fifteen minutes in an attempt to stir your sympathy, and yet she gave not one excuse for this horrible, cold-blooded murder of poor old 'Mother' Hughes."

"Her whole statement dealt with irrelevant matters and when it came to the shooting she got up here and without flinching told you that she remembered absolutely nothing at all about it. You know, gentlemen, if you can't believe such stuff as that."

Mr. Boykin followed Charles E. Wells, for the defense, who began speaking when court reconvened after the lunch period at 1:15 o'clock. Mr. Wells pleaded for an acquittal for Mrs. Hughes, addressing the jury for half an hour.

Declaring that every murder case was pleaded as an exception and that juries were always asked to show mercy in this particular case, the solicitor denounced a shaking of law enforcement and predicted that the day would come when the law would be nothing but a "bluff."

"Petticoat Murderess."
"The law is for women as well as men," the solicitor declared, "and the petticoat murderers should pay the penalty."

Mr. Hudson declared the slaying to have been the result of a "jealous, vengeful heart," terming Mrs. Hughes a "cold-blooded murderess."

"Gentlemen, find this woman guilty of murder. Don't find her guilty with recommendation for mercy. Don't find her guilty of manslaughter. Turn her loose rather than that. She should die on the gallows for an unpurged sin."

Sisters on Stand.
The trial was resumed at 9 o'clock Thursday morning with examination of witnesses. Miss Lena Stowers, with her sister, Miss Nellie Stowers, was placed on the stand by the state in rebuttal. She testified that she had never heard of Mrs. M. C. Hughes abusing her daughter-in-law and that she had never heard of any differences between the two women.

Henry Fuller, of Egan Park, was the first witness of Thursday's session. He denied taking liquor to the Hughes home, as charged by Mrs. Hughes in her statement.

Y. Z. Thomas, chief of police of the district, was a witness for the state.

Arguments Close.
Attorney Allen completed his address to the jury at 5 o'clock. That officers were getting out of the jurisdiction and that search of the Hughes home was nothing more than robbery was the basis of his plea for acquittal.

Judge Howard consumed 20 minutes in charging the jury, outlining laws pertaining to murder as charged on the indictment. He charged the jury also on the laws of voluntary manslaughter and justifiable homicide.

The court room remained packed to capacity throughout the day, perfect order being maintained despite the unusual crowd. A score or more of Porterdale citizens, who had known the Hughes families when they resided there, were interested spectators, seated on front seats.

Mrs. Hughes was dressed in black and though not weeping kept a small linen handkerchief pressed against her cheek. Frank Hughes, her husband, and his young son, Clarence, were seated with the defendant.

Judge Howard cautioned the jury that when the verdict was delivered to read the name of Mrs. Ida Hughes, in order that joint indictment of her and her husband might not be confused.

The temptation of a window filled with oranges Thursday night proved too great for Clifford Blackmon, 16 years old, of 406 East Fair street, and Avery Carroll, 14, of Whitehall street. The result is that the boys are now held on charges of breaking in and robbing the City Fruit and Grocery store, 65 East Alabama street. Entrance was made by twisting the lock off the door with a wrench.

Detectives J. R. Jackson and Al D. Cofely interrupted the "orange party" and took the boys to police headquarters, where they confessed to stealing two crates of the luscious fruit. Carroll, because of his youth, was sent to the juvenile detention home while Blackmon is held at the station. They told officers that they were afraid to take the fruit home, as their mothers would have made them take it back, so decided to eat as many oranges as possible.

BIBB GRAND JURY INDICTS NEGRO ON KILLING CHARGE

Macon, Ga., January 24.—Robert Hill, negro who is being held in the Tower in Atlanta, was indicted by the grand jury here this afternoon on a charge of murder in connection with the killing of J. W. Culpepper here on December 30, and also on a charge of criminal assault upon a young white woman.

The indictments were returned a few minutes after the young woman appeared before the grand jury.

headquarters for the women voters of the state in the Kimball house. In referring to numerous reports from all sections of the state predicting that Mr. McAdoo would get the majority of the vote in the national convention by an overwhelming vote, Mr. Hamilton stated that the fact that Mr. McAdoo was born and reared in Georgia gave citizens of this state an opportunity to help put a fellow native in the white house, which might not come again for many years.

McAdoo Is Native.
Mr. McAdoo was born in Cobb county, near Marietta, later moving to Milledgeville, where his boyhood years were spent.

A statement issued last night by Mr. Hamilton follows:

"As headquarters manager of the McAdoo campaign, I am pleased to see S. Bell, prominent banker of Milledgeville and a lifelong friend of Mr. McAdoo, has been unanimously chosen. We feel particularly fortunate in having Mr. Bell as our headquarters manager, for he is not only a native Georgian, but he is also a man of high character and high ability."

"In addition to Mr. Bell the following managers from throughout the state have been named: T. S. Haves, E. B. Smith, W. C. Smith, W. C. Smith, H. M. McIntosh, Albany; E. B. Weatherly, Macon; I. Langley, Rome; Andrew C. Erwin, Athens; C. G. Edwards, Savannah; P. S. Twitty, Brunswick; Dr. J. F. Toccoa; Buford Bowlin, Carrollton; W. C. Edwards, Dawson; Campbell Wallace, Marietta."

"We feel that we have a very strong list of managers who will work with Mr. Bell to the end that Mr. McAdoo will carry his native state by the most magnificent vote a campaigner has ever given a distinguished son."

Glowing Reports.
"We are receiving reports from every section of Georgia and we find that the McAdoo sentiment has crystallized into a solid front. It will sweep all opposition before him. Over 250 letters were written to men and women in every county in Georgia to ascertain their feelings and the sentiment in their respective counties. Replies and over 90 per cent came back with an enthusiastic endorsement of the son of Cobb county, stating that they would carry their respective sections overwhelmingly."

"The fact that Mr. McAdoo is always been a strong supporter of woman suffrage naturally means that the women of Georgia are strongly in his favor. However, it has been decided to establish headquarters at the Kimball for the women of the state and Mrs. Edgar Alexander, of Atlanta, has been designated as chairman. Mrs. Alexander is very enthusiastic and will appoint an executive committee of leading women throughout the state and plan to make the women's vote on March 19 practically 100 per cent for Mr. McAdoo."

Homecoming Planned.
"We are planning a monster homecoming for Mr. McAdoo which will be staged in Marietta probably during the first week in March. It was near Marietta that he was born and the home is still standing. The old negro mammy who sang to him is still living and will be a prominent figure in the celebration of welcoming 'her child' to his native hearth."

"Judge Newt Morris, chairman of the Cobb County McAdoo club, will be in charge of the arrangements for the homecoming and he states that it will be the greatest homecoming ever given a Georgian. It is probable that Mr. McAdoo will make several speeches on his visit to Georgia."

"Now Is the Time."
"The McAdoo state committee wishes to emphasize to Georgians that now is their opportunity to give practically unanimous endorsement to a Georgian, born and bred with all of the traditions of the south, with sympathy and understanding of southern problems, who has never left the States. Georgia has never had a native son as president and now is her golden opportunity. The same opportunity may not come again in many years. And when this Georgian, the one candidate before the people of this state who has any chance of the nomination and who will win against any candidate the republicans may name, the people of the Empire will be practically a unit in endorsing him."

"McAdoo's record is his platform, and he stands before the country today as the ablest, most progressive and most distinguished member of his party."

"We predict a landslide for McAdoo in Georgia and believe that he will be the next president of the United States."

DEFENDING PACT

Progressive Miner, October 1, 1923, published in Pittsburgh, distributed in the darkness of night, telling how I turned traitor, and filled with fulsome details. It was published and distributed at great cost, with money gained from sources unknown. Who sponsored it? Who are responsible?

"One of them sits among you—William A. Guiler, and named him as Thomas Myerscough and Thomas Ray."

"They lied when they penned that document. When confidence is no longer reposed in you, the dissolution of the United Mine Workers of America has indeed begun. This publication and some other so-called labor papers defile labor vastly more than the 'kept press' has ever done."

Proud of Record.
"All my predecessors have retired sadly from office, melancholy because of that element which watches always to attack and tear down. The same fate is reserved for me. The time will come when I shall be replaced. If it comes tomorrow I shall step down knowing well in my heart I served you as well as I can serve."

Debate had centered about Duncan McDonald, of Springfield, Ill., editor of a labor paper and former district president. "I had been charged by 'The President' John Stambaugh, of district nine, Pennsylvania, that an article in McDonald's paper, circulated through the anthracite field, was the real cause of failure of the 'check-off' system."

Strife with the insurgents was the administration's lot the entire day.

Three locals had offered a resolution demanding that all miners strike the moment war was declared rather than fight. It was defeated and a substitute adopted which said "abolition of war can be brought nearer by constant agitation for disarmament."

The delegates unanimously adopted a resolution approving a soldiers' referendum.

REFERENDUM MAY

the budget was generally the topic of discussion around city hall Thursday. It was generally agreed that council would approve the water rate increase which will add $500,000 to the city's current revenues, but would require a popular vote on the question of increasing the tax rate from $1.50 to $1.75.

Amendment Required.
Any raise in tax rate would have to be approved by special act of the general assembly this summer in the form of an amendment to the city of Atlanta charter. Advocates of a popular referendum on the question proposed to ask that the date of the vote be the same as the date of the primary in order that as many voters as possible could be brought to the polls.

There is ample time between the date of the popular vote and the date of the assembly session to prepare the necessary resolutions and pass them through council and the school board, it was pointed out.

FALL'S HARD LUCK
CAUSE OF LOAN

ment and that that might put him under obligation to you?" Senator Lenroot asked.

"No, sir, and it doesn't now. I admit that if you were to say, 'I might have been led to favor me, but he couldn't because the negotiations were not carried on by men under his control,' the oil man replied."

"The lease made in December, 1922, gave you the entire naval reserve No. 1, and it is that contract out of which you testified that you expected to receive $100,000,000," Senator Lenroot observed.

"Yes," Doherty replied.

"If Fall did exercise his judgment on that contract, in view of your statement that he might be influenced by you to be willing to turn back that contract?"

"He did not," Doherty replied.

"When you made the loan you had relations with the interior department and expected to have others," Lenroot continued. "Did it occur to you that to get a contract under these circumstances other than by competitive bids would be a matter of embarrassment?"

"Doherty turned this question off by discussing the conditions of the contract."

"Don't you think you ought to turn this contract back?" Lenroot persisted.

"To turn this contract back would be a confession of wrong," Doherty replied. "I want the matter decided by an unprejudiced board."

Dozens of senators, ex-senators, government officials and men formerly in public life jammed the committee room, anticipating sensational testimony. La Follette, whose resolution led to this investigation, sat nearest the head of the committee table, grinning broadly at the revelations which were extracted from Doherty.

Carries Surprise in Satchel.
The little oil man came forward, his rough, ruddy face, weatherbeaten from his earlier prospecting days, contrasting strangely with his acquired elegance displayed in a gold wrist watch and a large diamond ring. He took his seat, opening a little black satchel as he did so. He pulled out a typewritten memorandum, and in a high, weak voice, rapidly read his statement about the loan. It was a complete surprise to most of the committee, who had been trying to track the loan to the doors of Harry F. Sinclair, who obtained the Teapot Dome lease. But it was still apparent after Doherty was questioned that senators were not through with the Sinclair end of the inquiry.

Briefly this is Doherty's story, as drawn out by the questions of the senators:

Doherty's Version.
In October, 1921, Fall was complaining to Doherty that his Mexican holdings had been wiped out, that he had been unable to make any money out of his ranch during his term in Washington as senator from New Mexico and secretary of the interior, that he was thinking about resigning, and that he wished he could get $100,000 to buy an adjoining ranch at Three Rivers, New Mexico. Doherty took this as a hint and offered off-hand to loan Fall $100,000 on his unsecured note. Fall said he might be able to get the money from E. B. McLean, Washington publisher, or someone else. A few days later, after Doherty had returned to New York, Fall called him by long distance telephone and said he had been unable to make the other arrangements. He would like the loan from Doherty. The oil man cashed a check for $100,000 at Blair & Co., New York, and gave it to his son, who took it in a small satchel to Washington. The son brought back to his father Fall's note, payable on demand, with nothing written in regarding interest. It was dated November 30, 1921.

Planned to Hire Fall.
"How did you expect the note would be repaid?" Doherty was asked.

"I had thought of taking Fall into my employ and paying him enough so that he could pay off the note from his salary."

"Has any interest been paid?" "Not a cent."

The following April, Doherty obtained by competitive bid the contract for constructing storage tanks for the navy at Pearl Harbor, T. H., and for furnishing navy oil. He said the only profit out of this was in the transportation of the oil. But that contract contained a clause whereby he was to have preferential rights in bidding for California naval reserve No. 1, embracing 32,000 acres and 250,000,000 barrels of oil. This contract was obtained the following December and Doherty said it expected to make $100,000,000 out of it.

After completing his statement, Doherty's attorney proposed that the committee ask the president to appoint a board of experts to investigate the contracts and that if these were not found to be the best and most advantageous to the government, that could be obtained, Doherty would cause to be returned all interest in such contracts, minus just compensation for actual expenditures which have already been made.

Walsh Makes Merry.
After Doherty had been made to repeat that he expected to make a fortune out of the California reserve contract, which gave him the drilling rights on such a vast tract of the navy oil lands, Senator Walsh, of Montana, took visible delight and brought considerable laughter from the spectators in reading the recent testimony of Secretary of the Navy Denby on the matter. Denby, who had signed the contract, testified that he did not know what the contract provided and whether it signed over this tremendous reserve of 32,000 acres which had been set aside for the navy oil supply.

"Perhaps Secretary Denby isn't interested in details," Doherty observed with a twinkle when Walsh asked how Denby could be ignorant of such a momentous deal.

"But you knew what it provided?" Walsh said.

"Oh, yes," Doherty said in bringing a wave of laughter.

Fall Is Apprehled.
Doherty explained that he had not told this story of the loan when he was before the committee last December because he regarded it as Fall's business. However, after the conflicting versions were rendered by Fall and others, Doherty started for Washington, anxious to get to New Orleans to apprise Fall of his intention. He said he had advised Fall several weeks ago to "make a clean breast" of the whole affair.

"Have you got the note?" Senator Pittman asked.

"It is either in New York or Los Angeles," Doherty replied.

"Are you sure you have it?" Pittman persisted.

"Absolutely. I never lose any notes."

"When did you last see it?" Here Doherty reached to his inside pocket and pulled out a small black billfold.

"I carried it around in this for a while. You'd be surprised how many notes I have in it right now and how large they are."

The committee instructed Doherty to produce the note, together with the cancelled check for $100,000 on Blair & Co.

FALL IS IN CAPITAL TO EXPLAIN HIS LIE.
Washington, January 24.—Broken in body and in spirit, Albert B. Fall came back to Washington Thursday night to face his former associates in the senate and explain why he lied as to where he got the $100,000 loan while secretary of the interior.

He arrived here from New Orleans shortly before midnight and was taken to the home of J. W. Zevely, Sinclair's confidential representative here.

Fall presented a pathetic figure as he arrived here in the dead of night in a cold, January drizzle. He left the train with Zevely, with whom he has traveled from New Orleans. A crowd of newspaper reporters was there to question him—his only greeting in the capital where he has served so many years as senator, cabinet officer and confidant of presidents.

Brushes Scribes Aside.
Brushing by the newspaper men, he got into the Zevely automobile and was driven rapidly to the fashionable Connecticut avenue section. At Zevely's house, Fall was surrounded by reporters again.

"I have no statement to make," Fall said, when he stepped out of the car.

He was pressed as to the testimony of E. L. Doherty to the special senate committee Thursday, regarding the $100,000 loan.

"I don't know what he said, but I know what he was going to say," he said, smiling wilyly.

Fall Is Broken.
The former secretary protested that he was sick, and begged to be excused. Mrs. Zevely took him by the arm and led him into the house.

Fall seemed dazed by the tragedy which has crashed down around him in the short time since he left the cabinet. Once a fire-eater, a determined fighter, Zevely, through his objectives tolerating no interference, Fall is now a feeble, crushed old man. His weary eyes shined dully through his spectacles. His sloth hat was pulled far down over his face. He had the look of a haunted man and one who had told fight left in him.

Fall was told that Doherty in his testimony had intimated that there might be other loans besides the one the oil magnate had admitted to the senate committee. He persisted that he had nothing to say.

Fall will remain Thursday night at the home of Colonel Zevely, he said. He has made no plans for the rest of his stay here, he stated.

Colonel Zevely and Fall remained closed in their drawing room for several minutes after the train had arrived, then they went to the large automobile, belonging to Colonel Zevely, which was waiting underneath the station. There Mrs. Zevely met them.

European Pacifist Quits Continent For Tiny Island

Has 350 Acres at Low Tide,
50 at High, But Is Content.

London, January 24.—Thoroughly disgusted with the outlook for Europe, Norman Angell, the well-known pacifist writer, has purchased a tiny island off the east coast of England, and plans to retire there, far from the "hunger fringe" of the continent.

"At low tide I have 350 acres," he told a friend here, "and at high tide I have 50 acres. That's enough for any man."

"I have oyster beds and a cove where ducks breed. I also have an engineering problem—the disposal of a wreck on the island, half buried in the sand. I must either blow it up, or dig it out. You can't settle political problems that way—can you?"

SAILOR RUNS AMUCK AND KILLS 2 MEN, WOUNDS 5 OTHERS

Vancouver, B. C., January 24.—A sailor ran amuck with a knife on the Spanish steamship Pilar de Larrarte here today. He killed two men including the chief officer and wounded five.

FAMOUS RAINEY FOX HOUNDS TO BE SOLD

Blue Mountain, Miss., January 24.—The famous dogs with which the late Captain Paul J. Rainey, New York capitalist and sportsman, spent much of his time during the latter years of his life, are being sold in the general liquidation of the Rainey estate which includes a valuable hunting preserve near there.

The Rainey fox hounds are regarded as one of the best packs in the United States.

Captain Rainey was very much attached to his hounds—twenty-five of them—and shortly before his death declined an offer of $20,000 for one of the hounds. The pack will be sold with the stipulation that the dogs will be kept together even in future sales.

SISSONS IS FREE OF BIBB CHARGES
IN COTTON CASES

Macon, Ga., January 24.—Robert H. Sissons, cotton broker, indicted some months ago by a Bibb county grand jury on charges of embezzlement in connection with the failure of the Willingham warehouse, was found not guilty today in Bibb superior court. Judge H. A. Mathews directed the verdict at the instance of attorneys for both sides. At the time of the failure of the Willingham warehouse Mr. Sissons was secretary and treasurer of the company. The indictment against Mr. Sissons was returned after a number of indictments had been returned against Richard F. Willingham, president of the company, on charges of larceny after trust. These indictments are still pending against Willingham.

Dr. Henry Corbitt,
Victim of Gunshot,
In Grave Condition

Waycross, Ga., January 24.—The condition of Dr. Henry Corbitt, of Willacoochee, who was shot three times by Walter Hay, editor of the Willacoochee Times, following the printing of an editorial in that paper, remained unchanged today, according to medical attendants at the hospital here, where he was brought after the shooting last Saturday.

Dr. Corbitt was shot twice in the abdomen and once in the shoulder. His attendants describe his condition as "extremely serious," with a chance of recovery. He has been conscious every moment since the shooting.

Editor Hay is in the Willacoochee jail pending the outcome of Dr. Corbitt's injuries. The shooting occurred when a fight ensued over the printing of an editorial concerning the poisoning of Editor Hay's dog. It is alleged Editor Hay intimidated that Dr. Corbitt poisoned the dog.

New Premier of Great Britain

J. RAMSAY MACDONALD IN ACTION.

J. Ramsay MacDonald, while he is holding the reins of Great Britain's government, will leave the leadership of his labor party in the commons to a member of his cabinet. The house of commons thus loses the color given it by one of the two men considered the greatest speakers in England, the other being Balfour.

615 seats in commons. At the election it polled 4,500,000 out of more than 14,000,000 votes.

2. That a great preponderance of voters are satisfied with the present situation. Apart from the undoubted popularity of the royal family they realize that a British republic would mean the break-up not only of the British empire, but of the British Isles. The king is the one that binds. It is not believed that countries like Canada, New Zealand, South Africa and Australia—not to mention India—would listen to suggestions of a republican British government. A republic would mean the eventual breaking away of Scotland and Ireland, particularly Ulster, which is intensely monarchial.

King Still Signs.

3. The proportion of the labor vote that is republican will tend to be in favor of a republic would be an exaggeration. But even if it were it would be less than one-sixth of the total vote of the nation.

As regards labor leaders who advocate a republic, it is probable that labor's rise to power will tend to make them more conservative. Twenty years ago few would have been surprised to see David Lloyd George's name coupled with most of the republican outbursts which occurred here after the election.

Labor, in the years to come, may do much to alter political policies of Britain. But labor's decrees will still be signed by his majesty the king, head of the House of Windsor, address Buckingham palace.

of medium height, with dark hair and a closely clipped mustache.

Previously, under the direct examination of former Governor Whitman, his counsel, Anderson had admitted the claim of O. Birdsall Phillips, chief prosecution witness, that he had split with Phillips all the latter's commissions on subscriptions in excess of $10,000. But he claimed that Phillips himself had suggested this arrangement. Phillips, he said, had declared it was a crying shame that one of Anderson's field agents should be making more than twice Anderson's salary, which was $5,000.

Anderson admitted that he had transferred $14,400, half of Phillips' excess commissions for the year in question, to the latter's expense account, but denied that he had entered it as traveling expenses, or that he had told Phillips of an intention to "fool the Rockefeller."

The witness denied that he had ever defrauded the federal government, the state or the league. Anderson explained under direct examination that he had had the books altered merely to save Phillips from having to pay income tax on commissions that he did not actually receive.

He became angry and defiant when Pecon began to cross-examine him, but admitted that when Phillips was engaged as a solicitor the Rockefeller were contributing only $5,000 a year to the league coffers, and that after Phillips went to work, this amount increased to $75,000 annually.

Phillips' commissions were 20 percent on the first $25,000 he collected and 10 percent on all above that, Anderson said.

recently and a committee from the Parent-Teacher association asked either that the wall be restored or that the grounds be terraced to do away with the wall. It asked also that portable schools, which are part of the Highland school, be moved to a higher and safer part of the school grounds. A. C. Meixell, Dr. C. M. Eubanks and Wiley L. Moore were appointed by President Hancok as a special committee to arrange changes subject to the board's approval later.

The Highland school committee was headed by Mary P. Boone, city tax collector; Mrs. George M. Howson, president of the Parent-Teacher association; Mrs. E. E. Crawford, Mrs. Julian Baxter, Mrs. Francis E. Kamper, C. A. Alexander and C. C. Whitaker.

After the meeting, President Hancok stated that the finance committee's provision of $2,400,000 for schools would be totally inadequate for the department's needs this year, including imperative expenditure of $50,000 to complete the first unit of Girls' High school.

President Hancok expressed the belief that the board would cooperate with council in any way possible to raise needed additional revenue, but declared that the only permanent solution of the school problem would be to give the school board authority to levy its own taxes separately from other departments of the city government.

Rockdale County Farmer Finds Boll Weevil in Seed

Discovery that the boll weevil is hibernating inside the kernel of warehouse-stored cotton seed—one, according to J. J. Brown, commissioner of agriculture, which may be brought to figure prominently in the fight on the pest—was made in Conyers Thursday by Eugene Crutchfield, Rockdale county farmer.

Mr. Brown, in a statement to The Constitution, declared that weevils in numbers which would again menace the cotton crop had survived the most frigid weather encountered since their arrival in the cotton belt. These weevils have found shelter in fence jams, and have burrowed their way into trees, where they were not damaged by the cold, he said.

If the kernel of cotton seed is a natural winter sleeping ground in the weevil, however, the commissioner added, his actual elimination may be effected by special treatment of the infected seed.

As soon as the discovery is investigated by the state entomologist, a report will be released which will give more light on the subject.

The commissioner was startled when informed that weevils had been found hibernating inside of cotton seed. He said that this was a condition, as far as he knew, heretofore undiscovered. According to Mr. Brown it may develop into an important factor in the strenuous fight on the cotton pest.

Reports from Conyers indicate that weevils have been found in great numbers inside of kernels of many bushels of seed stored in warehouses there.

Seed infected by the weevil have taken on a black color, having shed all their white usually adheres to the ginned seed, it was said.

The men left Juarez Monday and were being hurried to the south in order to reinforce the federal armies.

President Obregon, advises state, attempted to return to Celaya Wednesday in order that he would not only be in touch with the western sector, but the fighting in the east as well. The presidential special hurriedly returned to Aguas Calientes when it was learned that Estrada's cavalry had cut the railway at Celaya and troops now are being concentrated at Aguas Calientes in the hope of cutting through.

Celaya Captured.

Reports of the capture by revolutionists under General Enrique Estrada of Celaya, scene of historic battles, are confirmed by unofficial wires reaching here.

No trains are reaching Juarez from Mexico City.

Celaya is the junction point for both the national railway line running to the border, and the railway running to Laredo, Texas. Trains yesterday were routed from Aguas Calientes, where President Obregon now is reported to be located, to San Luis Potosi and from there back to the National railway line.

General Estrada is reported to have completed his encircling movement and to be in the rear of the Obregon army advancing toward Guadalajara.

MEXICANS REPORT TO GET DESTROYER.

Philadelphia, January 24.—Mexican naval officers, under a commission from the Obregon government, have arrived in Philadelphia to take south a vessel for use in the present trouble in Mexico. The Mexican consul admitted that the men arrived today, and some of them were later found at a hotel. There were eight in the party and strict secrecy was observed by all of them.

The head of the party was said to be a captain H. Fernandez, who disappeared after he found that the presence of the Mexicans had become known. He said he was going to a smaller hotel where no one knew him. One member said there were sufficient men in the party to take a vessel south.

"We constitute," he said, "just a complete set of officers for a cruising crew for one vessel. We are here on a secret mission about which only our captain can speak."

Reports Unconfirmed.

Reports that the Obregon government had purchased a number of privately owned destroyers here could not be confirmed. The navy yard had not heard of it, according to the commandant's office, and Delaware river shipyards also professed to be without information.

Henry A. Hittner's Sons company, large purchasers of warships, stated it has not sold any warships and would not do so without the consent of the government. Thirteen destroyers purchased by it several years ago, have been dismantled. It was further stated. It was also said in the Hittner office that the navy yard here had checked up to see what had become of the vessels purchased by the Hittner company.

Vera Cruz, January 22.—(By Radio Via The Dallas News, by the Associated Press, Delayed.)—The port of Salina Cruz is in the power of the revolutionists. It was attacked

Georgia Needs Memorial To General Oglethorpe

By THOMAS W. CONNALLY.

With all the romance attending the development of America's youngest colony, Georgia has little in the way of suitable monuments or memorials to show for her pride of achievement.

For that reason alone it is a fine thing to have definitely located the grave of Georgia's illustrious founder, General James Edward Oglethorpe. It has revived his memory not only to this state, but also in England, and to perpetuate that memory through such a splendid educational institution as Oglethorpe university. Dr. Thos. W. Connally, the school's president, has directed the attention of the world to General Oglethorpe; he has made the world realize what manner of man he was. He has made us proud of him, and of Georgia, and of being Georgians.

General Oglethorpe, a man of education and culture, epitomized in his own life almost every virtue we land and emulate today. A fine man of business, a soldier and statesman, temperate in his personal life, just in his dealings with others, moderate in his treatment of those under him, a study of his life makes us feel that here, indeed, was a real leader. He has become a sort of patron saint of Oglethorpe university, and the things which he stood for are being taught today in that institution.

The proposed duplication of one of the buildings of his alma mater, Corpus Christi college, at Oxford, England, on the campus of Oglethorpe will increase our interest in the early history of the colony of Georgia and our consciousness of British ancestry and connection. I have been many times to Oxford, and I know Corpus Christi will easily merge architecturally with the Oglethorpe buildings.

I don't believe anything but good can come from cultivating closer relations between England and this country; between General Oglethorpe, Corpus Christi, the things they represent and Oglethorpe university; between the traditions of English culture, ripening these hundreds of years at Oxford and our local institutions sprung from influences originating there.

Woman's Club Stirs Interest in Move For Improvements

City-wide interest is being aroused in the mass meeting to be held at the Woman's club January 28 under the auspices of the club and the city planning commission to ascertain the public sentiment as to what public improvement is most needed.

Practically every major civic body and the principal fraternal organizations will be represented. Their spokesmen will be asked to make five-minute talks of what, in their opinion, constitutes the city's greatest need at present.

Mayor Sims and members of city council also will be included on the program.

Out of the group of public improvements suggested will be chosen the three deemed the most worthy, and the Woman's club will undertake to promote a movement for the improvements.

The meeting is being promoted by the civic committee of the Woman's club, of which Mrs. J. P. Billups is chairman. Cooperating with her is Mrs. M. C. Hardin, member of the city planning commission.

VITAL BLOW GIVEN AUTO THIEF BAND, POLICE BELIEVE

A vital blow will be given an alleged syndicate of automobile thieves operating in Atlanta with the recovery of Friday of five youths held by them, police say, was the opinion of Captain A. J. Holcombe, of the plainclothes department, and Officers Lamar Poole and S. A. Smith, detailed to tracing the stolen cars.

The boys gave their names to Madison officials as J. L. Givens, 25; Paul Johnson, 17; Henry Johnson, 18, all of 77 West Cain street; Frank Mills, 18, of Atlanta, and D. E. Sharpton, alias Tom Bradley, of East Point.

Six automobiles reported to have been stolen in Atlanta, have been recovered by Morgan county authorities who arrested the youths.

"We feel certain that these boys are tools in the hands of others and will subject them to a thorough examination upon their return," Captain Holcombe stated Thursday.

A total of fourteen automobiles were reported as stolen Wednesday and Thursday, some of them expensive machines.

Among the autos police recovered Thursday was the coupe of L. Amaker, 306 North Jackson street, which had been abandoned by the bandit who robbed him Tuesday night within two blocks of the place where the hold-up occurred.

CLEMENCY PLEAS HEARD THURSDAY BY COMMISSION

None of the cases were recommended for pardons. Of the 22 cases, 18 paroles, 3 commutations and 1 probation were recommended. None of the cases were of general interest, the commission announced.

To Show Historic Motion Pictures Here on Sunday

Important events in the history of America, produced by Yale University Press and distributed by Pathe Exchange, Inc., are now ready for release and distribution to the theaters, according to Mrs. Elizabeth Richey Dessez who is in Atlanta to supervise arrangements for the showing of the films in this city.

The production of this series of photoplays is a project to which the Yale University Press has devoted its best efforts for some years under the supervision and direction of editors appointed by the Council's Committee on Publications of Yale University.

Unusual care has been taken in the filming of the historical episodes to conform as closely as possible to the actual historical facts as preserved in records and manuscripts.

Object of Pictures. The object of these motion pictures is to present to present-day Americans the life, habits, modes of living of the first settlers in this country, the trials and heroic pioneer work of the men and women who heaved themselves homes from the primeval forests. In addition to their historical value the pictures possess no little dramatic quality, because in the presentation of these the Yale University Press has obtained the cooperation of able men throughout the country and in the field of drama as well as in that of history. It is because of these particulars that the project assumes national-wide significance and will be of lasting educational value in the upbuilding of the community.

Educators, teachers, school superintendents and university professors have hailed the release of the Chronicles of America Photoplays as marking the dawn of a new era for motion pictures. They will no doubt have marked influence on the whole motion picture industry, these men have pointed out, as it will lead into new channels of thought and endeavor.

It is for these reasons that Yale University Press has agreed to the theatrical distribution of these films. One critic after viewing the first two productions said that they were pictures of extraordinary beauty. The scenery he also described as away from the ordinary stage effects. There is no suspicion that the scenes have been made to look like this to suit the necessities of the play, but have rather been modeled in close conformity with historical occurrences, the critic wrote.

Mrs. Dessez said that the pictures are dedicated to the people of the United States in whose interest they were conceived and upon whose hearty support the producers feel that they can with reason rely.

Two of the Chronicles of America pictures, "Jamestown" and "Vincennes," will be shown at the Metropolitan theater here on Sunday, January 27, at 3 p. m.

Invitations to this private review have been issued by the Yale Alumni Association of Georgia, of which Morris Brandon is president.

"Jamestown" is the story of the first English American settlement. "Vincennes" is a dramatic narrative of George Rogers Clark's expedition into the northwest which added a vast territory to the colonies then at war with England for their independence.

CARLTON GIBSON SPEAKS AT DINERS AT WOMAN'S CLUB

Gradual introduction of students to high school studies and high school activities and procedure through the junior high school system has proven highly satisfactory in Savannah, declared Carlton B. Gibson, superintendent of the Savannah public schools, at a banquet attended by prominent school officials and teachers at the Atlanta Woman's club Thursday evening.

Before the junior high schools were inaugurated the school system lost many of its pupils during the first year of the high school period, he said. This was due to lack of interest in the work, which he attributed to the change from elementary schools to a new and strange procedure.

Under the new system, he said, pupils gradually become accustomed to high school life and work.

The occasion was a script dinner tendered Mr. Gibson and Dr. N. H. Ballard, state school superintendent. W. A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools, was toastmaster.

Dr. Ballard addressed the teachers and students.

RAIN AGAIN TODAY Dismal Weather to Continue for Another Day.

Dismal weather, drizzling rain and gusty wind blasts will continue for another twenty-four hours, according to the official forecaster, C. F. von Hermann. The temperature will remain about the same as it was Thursday.

Mr. von Hermann said that the likelihood of unsettled weather for Atlanta was based on disturbed atmospheric conditions originated over Oklahoma, which were gradually spreading.

He briefly explained the ruling of the state board of education which requires them to obtain teachers' certificates direct from the state department of education, instead of from county authorities, as heretofore. He said that the new provision is merely in accordance with a state law which has not been properly observed.

A large number of Atlanta school officials, supervisors and teachers were present.

PEEPLES ELECTED VALDOSTA MAYOR; FEW WOMEN VOTE

Valdosta, Ga., January 24.—(Special.)—W. D. Peeples, incumbent, was re-elected mayor, defeating his opponent, W. B. Conoley, a former councilman, by only 24 votes in the election here today. The following councilmen were elected: E. R. Barber, C. I. Harrell, W. H. McKee, Leo Miller, E. S. Richardson and W. F. Staten. The voting was light, many women being kept away from the polls by heavy rain most of the day.

Atlanta Architects Draw School Plan For Duluth Building

Duluth, Ga., January 24.—(Special.)—Tentative plans for a modern school building were presented by William J. Chase, a well-known school architect of Atlanta, to the local school board today, and approved with few minor modifications. The building, as planned, will have eight classrooms and a large auditorium. Construction will be of brick and the modern school standards will be adhered to. Mr. Chase expects to call for bids on the work during the month of February.

Duluth voted bonds for a new school building in 1920 but postponed letting the work on account of the high cost of building. Realizing that building costs are now low and that they are expected to begin to rise, the board has decided to proceed with the work at once in order to complete the building for the fall opening.

HOWARD RICE LEAVES FOR FLORIDA HOME

Ocala, Ga., January 24.—(Special.) Howard G. Rice, local attorney, left here Wednesday with his family for West Palm Beach, Fla., where he will practice his profession in the future.

The going of Mr. Rice makes the fifth attorney who has moved away from Ocala within the last twelve months, all of whom have gone to some point in Florida to follow the practice of law.

MELLON SCHEDULE MAY GO TO FLOOR

Washington, January 24.—The first partisan debate on taxes on the floor of the house today provoked a move by republican members of the ways and means committee to write their own income tax rates, which some predicted would place a bill before the house on substantially the lines suggested by Secretary Mellon.

Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, a republican member of the committee, made the proposal after the committee had voted to declare in the course of the debate that the Mellon bill would not pass in the house "even if it left to a vote of the republicans alone," and that President Coolidge would not veto a tax bill carrying the higher surtax rates of the democratic plan.

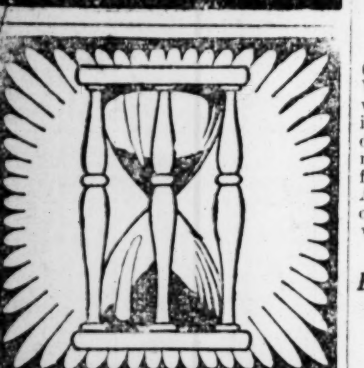

The committee continued discussions of the new excise rates and tentatively agreed to repeal the taxes on telephone and telegraph messages, leased wires and candy. This would result in a loss of $44,000,000 in revenue, it was estimated. Final changes in these rates will be determined tomorrow, with proposals to repeal taxes on automobile trucks and parts, theater admissions and various other taxes before the committee. The committee agreed to limit changes in these rates so that the loss in revenue would be held to $120,000,000.

While the debate proceeded in the house upon being opened by a prepared speech of Representative Mills, republican, New York, defending the Mellon bill, Senator Jones, democrat, New Mexico, brought the democratic plan for tax revision before the senate and criticized Secretary Mellon's description of it as "insincere and political."

STEVENSON RENEWS FIRE ON TOLBERT IN HOUSE PROBE

Washington, January 24.—Renewing his attack on J. W. Tolbert, republican national committeeman for South Carolina, Representative Stevenson, democrat, South Carolina, charged today in the house that Tolbert resigned recently as marshal for the western South Carolina district after he had been informed certain federal appointments favored by him would be made.

The house also was told by Representative Stevenson that Tolbert succeeded in having the size of the republican delegation to the next republican convention increased to 11 members and in return pledged his support to President Coolidge. As proof of his charge that Tolbert at one time had been convicted of crime, the South Carolina representative produced what he said was a copy of an indictment which showed that in 1904 Tolbert while postmaster had been charged with paying an $11 debt with stamped envelopes. He was tried, found guilty and fined $50 in federal court, Stevenson said.

LOAN BOARD MEMBER POSTS ARE PROTESTED

Washington, January 24.—Confusion of three members of the federal farm loan board was opposed at public hearings today before the senate banking and currency committee. Those appearing included Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, and Albin Duke, of the farm loan association.

One basis for opposition is the appointment of Charles E. Laddell, a former member of the board, as counsel and managing director at a salary of $25,000 a year. The commissioners whose nominations are being contested are Merton L. Corey, democrat, Nebraska, and Lewis J. Pettibone, of Kansas, and Elmer S. Landis, of Ohio, republican.

Senator Borah urged that the membership of the board be limited to five, and asked to be heard on his bill having that end in view. As a result action on the nominations was deferred for another week. Senator Borah informing the committee that he would be ready for a hearing on his measure next Thursday.

RAIL CONSOLIDATION BILL IS INTRODUCED

Washington, January 24.—A bill designed to stimulate voluntary consolidations of railroads into a limited number of systems, with competition preserved as fully as possible, was introduced today by Senator Cummins, of Iowa, ranking republican member of the interstate commerce committee and one of the authors of the present transportation act.

The measure was intended to carry out recommendation of both President Harding and President Coolidge. It would direct the interstate commerce commission to adopt "as soon as practicable" a consolidation plan for all the railway properties in the country. Wherever practicable existing routes and channels of trade and commerce would be maintained.

The several systems would be so arranged that "the cost of transportation as between competitive systems and as related to the values of the properties through which the service is rendered shall be the same, so far as practicable, so that these systems can employ uniform rates in the movement of commodities." The bill under efficient management earn substantially the same rate of return upon the value of their respective railway properties.

When a tentative plan has been agreed upon, the commission, upon reasonable notice, including notice to the governor of each state, would hear all persons who might file or present objections thereto. After the hearings the commission would adopt a plan of alternate plans for consolidation. Under the bill it would be lawful for two or more carriers to carry out any consolidation of railway properties, which might be approved by the interstate commerce commission.

FRENCH PEACE PLAN CENTER OF ATTENTION

Paris, January 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—The French peace plan contest for prizes totalling 200,000 francs, which was inaugurated a few days ago, promises to attract as much attention in France as the Bok contest did in America, judging from the responses already received by the contest committee, headed by Leon Bourgeois.

The committee sent out its first preliminary notices little more than a week ago and already applications for the rules of the contest are coming in at the rate of more than 100 daily and about a score of plans already have been submitted. The entire amount of the prizes being donated by Edward A. Filene, of Boston, who during his recent trip in Europe, arranged with M. Bourgeois for holding the contest under the latter's patronage. Senator Henry de Jouvenel is the active organizer of the contest and Gustav Rouger, the French author and poet, is the acting secretary general of the committee.

By far the greatest number of the applications thus far received come from the inhabitants of the devastated regions. All classes of society were represented—laborers, professors, doctors, peasants, factory workers and the like.

According to the rules of the contest all the participants must be of French nationality. The plans must not exceed 5,000 words in length, with a preface not exceeding 500 words. All the plans must be in the mails by April 15. The plans are to be sent in anonymously but the names of the authors must accompany them in separate envelopes with numbers corresponding to those on the plans themselves. The first prize is 100,000 francs, the second 30,000 and the third 20,000. There are also prizes of 2,000 francs each and twenty of 1,000 francs each.

Georgia Progress Shown in Pageant At Farm Meeting

Athens, Ga., January 24.—(Special.)—Progressive Georgia was shown here tonight in a pageant depicting the history of the state staged by Miss Laura Blackshear, author, at the State Farmers' conference. More than 100 characters were used in the cast.

Scores of co-eds at the university, boys, county and farm and economic agents took part in the big pageant, despite the bad weather. It attracted a large crowd to Hardman hall on the campus of the agricultural college. The pageant depicted the progress of Georgia from the earliest colonial times to the modern days.

Consider Dairying. Progress of the dairy industry in Georgia and the south and discussion of the problems in its various branches were the main subjects of discussion featured Thursday's session of the conference. Professors W. S. Rice, C. E. Kellogg, F. W. Fitch and Milton Jarnigan, of the college faculty, and S. C. Thompson, of the United States department of agriculture, were principal speakers. "The dairy row spoke at noon," N. H. Ballard, who was to speak, did not arrive.

In discussing the feeding of cows, Dr. Jarnigan stressed the need of a wider understanding of the principles of feeding, not only in dairy sections, but by the average farmer. A speaker, who was to speak, did not arrive. When a tentative plan has been agreed upon, the commission, upon reasonable notice, including notice to the governor of each state, would hear all persons who might file or present objections thereto. After the hearings the commission would adopt a plan of alternate plans for consolidation.

Need Pasture Land.

Dr. Jarnigan advised farmers not to go into the dairying business unless from one and a half to three acres or pasture land for each cow could be provided.

Many sections of Georgia have been interested in the establishment of cheese factories. Dr. Jarnigan stated he was warned against the establishment of cheese factories in sections where there is not a minimum of 150 producing cows.

Professor Fitch, discussing the conditions necessary to successful creamery operation declared that some of the 18 creameries now in operation in Georgia had failed to prove successful because they had been located in sections unsuited to the purpose. The creameries, he said, are operating at probably less than 25 per cent of the possible capacity. He pointed out, however, that under favorable surroundings and with the introduction of business methods, creamery operation should be entirely successful.

Two opportunities for further practical development of dairying in the near future were suggested by the speaker. Extension of cheese factories and creameries to undeveloped sections, where conditions are favorable, and increase of the output of those now in operation. Professor Thompson advised that the cheese factory he made the basis of expansion in Georgia.

CHURCH VOTES $50,000 FOR AID IN GERMANY

Chicago, January 24.—The Methodist Episcopal council of boards of benevolence today voted $50,000 to aid their ministers and deaconesses and their children who are suffering privations in Germany.

sent in anonymously but the names of the authors must accompany them in separate envelopes with numbers corresponding to those on the plans themselves. ## SNYDER WILL OPPOSE PINCHOT IN PRIMARY

Harrisburg, Pa., January 24.—State Treasurer Charles A. Snyder, in a statement today, declared he would oppose Governor Pinchot as one of the seven delegates-at-large to the republican national convention and would "appeal to all republicans of Pennsylvania to defeat him at the polls."

His reasons for the opposition were that the governor "is not a Pennsylvanian in spirit," that he is "not a republican," that "the governor of the commonwealth was cast into office through a political storm," and that in the convention, if elected, he "will bring into the forum an intrigue and a bloc such as will reflect only indignity upon the other delegates and make Pennsylvania the ridicule of its sister states."

TITLED VIRGINIA WOMAN YEARS FOR OLD HAUNTS

New York, January 24.—Baroness von Horn, the former Virginia Carrington, of Richmond, Va., and Boston, Mass., arrived on the Colombo from Naples today to resume residence in her native land after twenty years' absence.

"I'm so glad to be back," she said, as she watched the Manhattan skyline looming into view. "I'm as excited as a school girl. I want to feel again the anxious rush and bustle of the big city and to regain my American citizenship as soon as I can."

Virginia Carrington, who was numbered among the noted beauties of the south of her debutante days, was married to Baron von Horn in Berlin in 1904. Since the outbreak of the war and her husband's death in 1911 she has lived a secluded life in Naples, she said.

Quake Warnings May Be Developed By Seismograph

Washington, January 24.—Belief that continued study of seismological data will enable scientists to send out warnings of earthquakes and volcanic eruptions in time to save lives and to some extent, protect property, was expressed today by Dr. Thomas A. Jagger, director of the government's Hawaiian volcano observatory.

Dr. Jagger has been in Japan conferring with scientists in regard to the earthquake disaster there in August, on which he is preparing a comprehensive report for the government.

Legions of Maimed Storm Parliament Demanding Pensions

Vienna, January 24.—A deputation of 400 cripples, 50 of whom brandished their crutches, stormed the parliament building yesterday, clamoring for the immediate payment of overdue pensions. After two hours of speech-making the demonstrators were assured their grievances would be redressed, whereupon they hobbled home threatening to return if the promises of the ministers were not fulfilled.

George Protests Discrimination In Port Ruling

Washington, January 24.—(Special.)—A vigorous protest has been made to the emergency fleet corporation and the shipping board by Senator George, of Georgia, against the refusal of the fleet corporation, under its new powers, to accord southern ports the same rates as North Atlantic ports on export shipments originating in the middle west.

Senator George, in making his protest, pointed out that this action will nullify export rail rates to southern ports on large movements of European traffic from central western points.

He also protested to the interstate commerce commission against favorable consideration of the petition filed by the Boston Chamber of Commerce and allied associations of Boston and Massachusetts to intervene in the complaint of the southern Atlantic ports. The senator believes that great inroads would necessarily be made into the volume of commerce passing through south Atlantic and Georgia ports, if the petition filed by the Boston Chamber of Commerce and allied associations of Boston and Massachusetts is granted.

IRWIN TRUCKERS PREPARE TO PLANT DIVERSIFIED CROPS

Arrangements have already been made for tomato plants.

For December the returns showed manufacture of 275,260 passenger cars and 27,875 trucks.

Detroit, Mich., January 24.—The Ford Motor company made 2,200,682 automobiles, trucks and tractors in 1923—775,059 more than in any previous year, according to production figures for the year, announced today. Of the total 1,915,485 automobiles and trucks were made in this country and 175,474 in foreign plants, including Canada. To the total of these are added 101,898 tractors and 7,825 Lincoln cars.

The figures were coupled with an announcement that the Ford company expects to exceed this figure in its 1924 production and that it plans to start early this spring on its program of 10,000 cars daily.

The statement says: "The production of more than 2,200,000 automobiles in one year probably is the greater feat in manufacturing ever accomplished, especially in view of the fact that the Ford company controls the complete manufacture and raw material supplies for a large proportion of everything that goes into the make-up of its products."

CHAPTER XX.

Carney is Heard From.

In the tropics, sudden violent exertion is very bad for any man; for one whose heart is under the insidious strain which yaks water puts upon it, it is infinitely worse.

In fact, Eileen more quickly recovered than Barstow even if the latter did compel his legs to support him before she was smiling her thanks to Marsden's agent for the capable manner in which he had rendered first aid and was assuring him that she was quite able to walk back to the consulate without any help.

On the way to the consulate—a path that was bordered by yapping, black-stricken blacks—the extent of his conversation was an inquiry, every fifty yards or so, as to Eileen's ability to complete the distance, and whether it would not be well to wait and send for a hammock.

Eileen's one desire was to make as little fuss and trouble as possible and to retire to her room for a few hours' rest and seclusion.

Barstow also sought refuge in his rooms as quickly as possible.

When Muriel had heard the report that Eileen had been killed, her nerve, already tried to breaking point, had collapsed without further resistance, so that for several minutes she had clung to Macara as to the proverbial straw.

Every little while, however, as if there was nothing unusual in the proceeding, he bent his head to kiss the enticing curve of her neck, each kiss just a little more emphatic than its predecessor.

Muriel made no protest, not even when, gently, but in a manner that did not tolerate resistance—he kissed her with astonishing tenderness full on the lips.

Vaguely, though, of course, Macara did not know that she was wondering if Danvers's kisses would be as uninteresting as that.

A low knock upon the door put a climax upon Macara's opportunity and when Muriel's maid accepted the invitation to come in, there was nothing at all for her Sierra Leonean tongue to wag about.

Whereupon Muriel, making the best use she could of the reaction, murmured a pathetic little apology to Macara and beat a hasty retreat into her bedroom accompanied by her maid, leaving the trader to take his departure as best he might.

When Barstow and Carney had seen Eileen safely to her room, there was only the M. O. to wonder why Muriel did not appear to welcome them. Her next companion, Barstow into the latter's bedroom, handed his hand for him and advised him to lie down for a while, went stumping out speculating quite seriously upon what had happened to the provincial commissioner's heart.

Just as the throbbing pain in his neck had diminished almost to vanishing point, Muriel came and stood in his bedroom doorway.

"I don't suppose you will be equal to lunch," she asked. "No, I don't think so," he said perkily. "I believe I am under doctor's orders."

"You seem to have made quite a brutal exhibition of yourself this morning," Miss Ellesmere said, admiring that sort of thing.

"I don't know whether Miss Ellesmere likes a fight or no," Barstow told her smoothly. "She did not see any of the one you refer to. The first charge put her safely out of it."

"And you continued it simply for the bestial love of it—or of her?" "God!" Barstow was on his feet, swaying a little, but gathering strength every second.

"Your cheap little peccadillo does not interest me, but I will not have it paraded before my eyes and for the benefit of any one who cares to see. Instead of being my companion, the Ellesmere woman has quite evidently become yours, and I cannot continue to tolerate her presence at our table; I shall tell her so this evening."

"Stop!" There was no exclamation point in Barstow's voice.

"I will not have her at our table!" "Go to your room."

"You—you cannot compel me to sit at the same table with—your women," she whined savagely. "Not even out here. I have to draw the line somewhere, and—"

A sharp indrawn breath ended it as Barstow, with incredible speed, compassed the distance between them. With a supple twist of her body, Muriel leaped back and out of the grip of his claw-like right hand, tearing the flimsy silk sleeve of her blouse from shoulder to elbow. She fled precipitately and in mortal terror of her life; not to her own room, however, but to Carney's.

She did not know that it was Carney's room; that is, she did not pick and choose.

"He—his mad!" "Who is mad?"

"Dickie. He leaped at me suddenly like a madman and—look at my sleeve!"

"I see it," quietly. "It's a pretty bad tear. Ruined a perfectly good blouse, I should say. Barstow has had a rough morning—a lot rougher than we imagine—strained his heart, I think—and I'm going to give him something to relieve that. Between you and me, Mrs. Barstow, we've got to be careful of him or we'll be losing him first thing you know."

"He's been acting so queerly toward me of late," she whimpered. "Somehow he makes me terribly afraid and Miss Ellesmere is of no earthly use to me. In fact, I—I think she encourages him."

"I'll go along and see how mad he is," Carney intimated prosily. "You can stay here for a while if you care to."

"I'm afraid to—to be alone!" "If you are afraid, go home. There's a steamer sails on Saturday."

Muriel's eyes popped wide with amazement. "You—you have no right!"

"Right! I'll show you whether I have or not. Here I am losing men every twenty-four hours—men, I said —and I've got to have my time taken up with a whimpering, hysterical woman who hasn't got sense enough to keep out of her husband's way when his nerves are raw, but insists on gadding him into losing his temper altogether. You ought to be ashamed of yourself!" Then, even more emphatically, "I'm not blind and I know Barstow, and if I hear any more of this from you or any one else, I'll invalid you home on Saturday's boat as sure as you are the provincial commissioner's wife. Now go to bed and stay there until I tell you to get up."

Picking up a bottle of medicine from the table, Carney stomped out and along to Barstow's room.

The next morning, when a short polite note from Barstow informed her that he was compelled to leave Warri on urgent business and would be gone for at least two weeks, she leaped out of bed so enthusiastically that she almost upset the breakfast table.

Danvers did not hear the thumping of opportunity's fist upon his door now, he never would.

CHAPTER XXII.

Taking Her Own Advice.

No one was blind to the significance of the frequency of Macara's visits to the consulate.

How Macara managed to make any headway with a woman as unattainable as Muriel gave every indication of being, was food for a great deal of speculation and talk, to much of which Danvers was compelled to listen. One evening it was particularly marked.

Danvers, however, took no part and when dinner was over he repaired to his room in a turbulent frame of mind. In the cool of the next afternoon, he invited himself to tiffin with Muriel.

"Macara's visits here are causing a lot of talk," he said with startling abruptness, and I feel that you ought to know. Most of the talk puts the onus of responsibility upon Macara—credits it to his cheek and colossal egoism—but there is a growing belief that if you were not giving him some encouragement, he would hardly—er—keep it up. It is none of my business, of course, but since Barstow is away and you are more or less alone, I felt that in fairness to him as well as to you, you should be given a chance to prevent this gossip becoming any more—er—serious."

"Thank you," Muriel's voice was very low, but it had an edge like a razor. "That is very thoughtful of you. Come over here. I want to talk to you."

Danvers hesitated, then obeyed promptly.

"It was very good of you to come in and tell me and I want you to know that I really do appreciate it very much. I am so terribly alone here! No one ever comes in to talk to me except Mr. Macara. Miss Ellesmere, poor girl, bores me dreadfully; the doctor doesn't like me and this is the first time you have been near me for weeks. Do you think that was kind? Surely there are lots of other things we can talk about?"

"Yes—that is—I suppose so, but I—Danvers's face reflected a storm of conflicting emotions—"I'm afraid I won't do. Neither of us can afford to—er—to take the risk."

"What are you afraid of, Mr. Danvers?"

Danvers winced. "Don't trifle!" he ordered, his voice rasping disagreeably.

"Trifle. Am I trifling? Oh, I'm sorry. I really don't mean to. You see, I appreciate your friendship so much why can't we be just friends? Don't you like me? Or is it simply because you like yourself more? Some men are so afraid of what people will think of them that they go on living a perpetual lie, lacking the courage to be as happy as their impulses would make them if given half a chance. Why don't you try being honest—just once?" Her upturned face was just beneath his own, her eyes laughing up at him. "I think you'd find it lots of fun!"

"Fun?" Danvers muttered thickly, as his defense went down with a crash. "Can't you see that—that I—no you know that I love you, and yet you play!"

With a vague idea of frightening her into a realization that she could not trifle with a truth of that sort, he swept her crushingly into his arms, his bear-like embrace making it difficult for Muriel to breathe. But she wanted him to hold her like that. The consciousness of her power to conquer seemed to give way in an instant to a revolutionary desire to be conquered, and when Danvers' lips suddenly burned upon her own, Muriel quite unknowingly took her own advice and became true to herself.

It was not a pretty performance. It started Danvers infinitely more than resistance would have done. His unwilling lips drew away from her own and his great hands wrenched her arms from about his neck.

Unfortunately for Muriel, Danvers really loved her. And when, his face grown haggard in a moment he turned and slouched from the room muttering incoherently to himself, Muriel did not understand his point of view in the least. So she hated him as venomously as he might expect to be hated by any woman—under the circumstances.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Test.

A twenty-paddle canoe sidled silently up to the consulate gig-wharf not many minutes before midnight about ten days—or nights—later, and a white man, who could scarcely be deemed white in color, slunk up the concrete path to the consulate entrance followed by a black boy who was prayerfully glad to be back again.

Barstow knew that he was sick—that his nerves were shattered and that some strange disease was destroying his reason and feeding his hate to make it murderous. He had been forced to that conclusion before he left Benin City to tramp through the bush to Sikuku.

He emerged at Sikuku two weeks later trailing Beeli and his carriers behind him; a death-head leading a straggling procession of badly scared blacks who looked fearfully upon his face and planned gay sacrifices to propitiate the evil god that unquestionably was in him.

Dallying here and there en route, Barstow had learned that solitude was not the thing. He knew this definitely at a place called Nawami, where he met the lonely trader's assistant in charge of the mahogany concession there. The sight of a white face, even if it did show some hesitancy about welcoming him, was like a quieting hand upon his shoulder; a reminder that he, too, was white, and that it was not good to slink in the shadows while others walked in the light.

He made the decision, too, in the teeth of the day and date which the calendar proclaimed; because, as he was well aware, provincial headquarters even then were making preparation for unusually elaborate Christmas festivities over which he was to preside.

Not only was it his first Christmas in Warri, but it also happened that the brown men from the north, on their way to the Lagos native arts and crafts exhibition, would descend upon Warri at that time, and even if Christmas meant nothing to the visitors—most of them being either Mohammedan or pagan—it had been planned to extend to them a politically judicious hospitality and give them a generous welcome.

Beginning the day with a formal levee, feasting and games and dancing would follow; but Barstow's thoughts traveled no farther than the levee which was to be held by the provincial commissioner and his wife.

But of course, it was impossible! That he, Richard Barstow, by any stretch of the imagination, could deliberately and joyfully strangle Muriel at an official levee upon a platform before the eyes of his assembled guests, was obviously absurd! His imagination was playing him tricks again.

He rose and paced the room nervously.

Presently Beeli had completed his duties and, to his intense relief, had been dismissed for the night. Barstow listened until the boy's shuffling step had died away and the instant it did he was seized with a sense of terrible isolation and a shivering fear of what he might do when left to himself as he was then—so near to Muriel.

Muriel's lamp burned low. Her face was toward the light and one round arm was lying outside the covert.

As Barstow peered in upon her he knew that she was beautiful beyond words, that the snare of her loveliness was the thing he hated most.

He reached forth a claw-like hand and slowly drew back the curtain. Nothing lacy in that action; and had a mirror been held up to his face then he would have leaped back in horror from the Thing he had become.

Civic Organizations Invite Striblings Here

Junior Chamber Votes Youth Membership; To Be Honored At Lions' Club Luncheon

Following Mayor Walter A. Sims' formal invitation to Young Striblings and his family to make Atlanta their home in the future, local civic organizations along with many prominent individuals yesterday fell into line with the move to bring the Georgia leader here.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce at its weekly luncheon unanimously elected Young Striblings to membership in that organization and he was invited to be the guest of honor along with his family at the weekly luncheon on January 23.

The telegram is as follows:

Atlanta Ga., January 23, 1924.

W. L. Striblings, Jr., Macon Ga. One thousand members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Atlanta have unanimously elected you to membership. We hope you will locate in Atlanta so that you can associate yourself with us permanently.

ROY LECRAW, President, Chamber of Commerce.

No sooner had this invitation been filed here it was learned that the Lions' club had joined Mayor Sims in his invitation and the Striblings family was also invited to be the guests of that club at its luncheon on next Tuesday.

The Lions' club of Atlanta joins the mayor of this city in extending cordial invitation to you and your family to make Atlanta your home. Will you, wife, Young Striblings and party be the guests of the Lions' club at regular weekly dinner in Ansley hotel, 1 o'clock Tuesday, January 29.

(Signed) PRESS HUBBARD, Vice President Lions' Club.

Many individual citizens kept the wires hot yesterday to Macon while many contented themselves with writing letters to this famous youth urging him to make his future home here. This is only a part of a concerted move on the part of the followers of the youngster to have him move here. Pa Striblings became dissatisfied when his youngster was fired out of Lanier High school in Macon recently and announced his intentions of moving

M'INTYRE TO FINISH AT TECH

Johnny McIntyre leaves Georgia Tech in the next few days to take up a business life out in the wild west. With his departure, Tech will lose a mighty good football player and a prince of a fellow.

Johnny completes his course as soon as the present examination period is over. While he will not graduate until June, yet he has completed all the requirements for a diploma and all that stands now between John and his sheepskin are something like four months.

"Mac" came to Tech in the fall of 1919, after serving over there with the American army for about a year. He dropped out in Pine Bluff, Ark., and played on the football team out there.

Once arrived at the institution, Johnny went right to work, but did not quite have the experience to make the team. In 1920, Coach Alex's first year, Johnny fought his way up to the second varsity, and was awarded his "220." The year 1921 found Johnny much improved and he made his varsity letter, playing guard.

In 1922, he played a remarkably consistent game. In fact, such was the calibre of his work, that he was elected captain of the 1923 team.

Johnny made an able leader last fall and set an admirable example to his men by his hard, earnest work. He is one of the most popular captains who ever graced a Tech uniform. John is the mark and soul of consistency. He has never played a sorry game in his life, and some of his performances have been remarkable.

A better liked boy never attended school at Tech. He is popular with everybody and has nothing but friends on the campus. When Johnny leaves Tech will be the loser, the west will be the gainer.

Georgia Quintet Swamps Furman

BY DELACEY ALLEN.

Athens, Ga., January 21.—In one of the prettiest, fastest and most exciting games ever seen on an Athens court, the Georgia Bulldogs defeated the Furman Hornets, 50 to 27.

Charlie Wiehrs played the game of his life, not only guarding closely but also doing very effective work forward and throwing four fouls out of four attempts. Barring accidents and mishaps he will be a star in the coming tournament. Joe Bennett, playing stationary guard, did well in defense, until he was ousted for personal fouls. With these two guarding as they did tonight it will take a mighty good team to count a very high score.

Pokey Williams played his usual good game as a floor man, always being right on top of the play, and a toss for the goal. And Ed Gurr and Nolan Richardson continued to scintillate. We worked up to one of these through Furman's five-man defense and some way somehow they got a pitch for the goal no matter what their position was. The Bulldogs' largest audience of the year up and on their toes by their colorful and daring plays.

The Line-Up. GEORGIA Pos. FURMAN Williams (4) Galloway (2) Richardson (13) Robertson (5) Gurr (19) Brock (8) Bennett (2) Dobson (10) Wiehrs (10) Smith (10) Substitutes: For Georgia, Tipton for Bennett, Safford for Williams, Harris 2 for Gurr, Spann for Wiehrs. For Furman, Harling 10 for Galloway, Rasmor 1 for Dobson, Tysen for Rasmor, Rasmor 2 Smith, Waters for Dobson, Galloway for Rasmor.

COULDN'T WAIT TO START PACKING

Chicago, January 24.—Bill Killifer, the Cubs' manager, left for St. Louis, restlessness Thursday, journeyed to the north side ball grounds and started packing up for Catalina Island, where the team will train.

Although the battery contingent, which Bill will pilot west, will not depart for three weeks, and only thirty-two men will receive transportation to the camp, Killifer just couldn't wait to get their things ready. He stowed away ninety uniforms, fifty dozen baseballs and 100 bats.

SHREVEPORT CLUB GETS PITCHER MACK

Chicago, January 24.—Pitcher "Stubby" Mack tonight was released by the Chicago White Sox under option to the Shreveport club of the Texas league. Mack was obtained from the Seattle club of the Pacific Coast league two years ago.

J. P. C. QUINTET WINS FROM TRINITY TRAMPS

The fast Jewish Progressive club had very little difficulty in defeating the Trinity Tramps last night by the score of 63 to 20.

The Trinity boys played a hard and clean game, but they were just naturally no match for the clubbers. At the end of the first half, the score was 35-8, and soon after this juncture Coach Bean sent in his entire second team, and although they didn't measure up to the work of the first five, they did very well.

It was some varsity as last year. With the exception of Hudson, Alabama has returned its team. At St. John's has been replaced by Fred Moore, a letter man. Hudson has been replaced by McCartney, also a letter man.

Alabama will tower above the Tech team in height as did Mercer. Carter and Propert are the two tallest men on the team, both being well over six feet. Propert played center on the football team, and made all-southern this past football season. Carter was prominently mentioned for all-southern basketball center last year, but only stood to Redd by a close vote. He stands a good chance to make that honor this year.

It has been announced by Coaches Alexander and Bean that the following prices will prevail during the games. Admission down stairs $1.00, admission upstairs .50 cents. Tech students will be admitted for 25 cents. Both games begin at 8:30 o'clock.

Will Appear on Fight Card

BOOTS ANTLEY.

This popular little fighter hailing from Columbus will fight one of the prelims booked for the Striblings-Shade fight on Tuesday at the City Auditorium. Antley is one of the most popular little fighters in the state and reports from his home indicate that he is in excellent shape for the go. Antley holds the decision over many of the best-known fighters in the south.

GOLD STRIKE AT RAMPART LASTED ONLY SHORT TIME

BY GEEK RICHARD.

The gold strike at Rampart blew up with a bang—not exactly a bang, at that. It was more like the bursting of a cap on a musket. The load didn't go off. We didn't find as much gold as I have in my teeth right now.

It was in those trying days, though, that the principles of honesty were grounded in me. I believe now it was the biggest thing, the naturals, the openness. Even though I have observed the seamy side of life, I do not believe to this day that many people are dishonest by nature. The principles of square dealing, I find, apply in the fight game just as they did along the Yukon when every man was his own.

There were no cheats, no adjustments. We didn't have disputes. The question has been asked me, "How do you manage to make the roughnecks in the fight game keep their word?"

Truthfully I can say that I never have. I've found these roughnecks dishonest.

"If you give an ignorant man the impression that you are on the square with him he will be on the square with you. The paradox managers may give trouble but never the man who does the fighting."

There were two boats on the Yukon, the Bella and the Alice. They brought up supplies in the spring. Whether a miner was present or not they would leave a six months' supply of food on the banks of the stream. The name on it and nobody ever thought of molesting it. There was no favoritism. A man was a man and he needed his food.

Going out of Dawson City, dead broke and disappointed, three prospectors and myself aimed ourselves at Rampart. As I say, that strike was a blunder. There we were, further away than ever and more dead broke than ever—if that be possible. My $57,000 had gone rolling along with a little white ball on the roulette wheel.

I am trying to make the point that money, except in so much as it would buy food, never concerned us deeply. It doesn't bother me to this day.

His Name Was Rex Beach. We learned that the river boats would pay $15 a cord for wood, cut the proper length for the boilers and piled on the banks of the stream. That being the only way out we started cutting wood. Nobody checked up this wood and no workman thought of getting his pay at that time. When the ice broke and the boats got through they would simply pick up the wood, figure out the amount and leave the money for us. The boat men trusted us because they knew we trusted them.

So I set to work as a wood-cutter. It took muscle, but had it. We worked several months at this job in an effort to restore our lost fortunes.

One day I noticed another gang cutting wood on the opposite bank. I knew this young fellow was educated, a sort of college man, but I thought him just a prospector like myself. In fact, he was. It was a long time after that before I ever knew that my friend Rex Beach, cutting cordwood on the Yukon, was the great writer. I simply knew him as Beach, a darn good fellow.

I don't remember how much Beach earned that winter but I earned about $300.

"Rex Beach," he told me. I knew this young fellow was educated, a sort of college man, but I thought him just a prospector like myself. In fact, he was. ### PREPS HAVE MANY GAMES SLATED

Tech High and G. M. A. have postponed the game that was scheduled for this afternoon because of the absence of a court upon which to stage the battle, and thus passes into oblivion the hopes entertained by numerous fans of seeing one of best prep battles ever fought. At any rate it is a disappointment to miss such a game, even though it will be played in a couple of weeks.

G. M. A. will play the Oglethorpe freshmen five Saturday afternoon on the Fort McPherson court, and Tech High showed her stuff against Locust Grove yesterday. The cadets will have little trouble in disposing of the freshmen team, even though it includes two great prep stars, Stephens and O'Dwyer, of Boys' High fame. The Oglethorpe aggregation has had no court to practice on, and consequently can hardly hope to be in condition.

Since the cancellation of the above game, the best battle on deck this week will be between Boys' High and Lanier. The only drawback about this game is that it will benefit Macon fans and not Atlantans, because the Gilmerite five is the team to take to the road. At any rate, when these two meet tonight a real battle will be waged, one of the kind that delights spectators. A week ago Boys' High would have hardly been conceded a chance against the Poets, but after the wonderful game Coach Johnson's men put up against Fulton Tuesday in their opening battle of the season, Boys' High has more than a fighting chance against the Macon quintet.

Has Good Chance. On paper, the local five would not stack up so high, but on the court it seems to have a much better rating. Last year in the G. I. A. A. tournament, Boys' High met the Poets in the finals and defeated them by two points.

That was the first defeat a Lanier basketball team had suffered on its court in a number of years, and naturally when Boys' High runs up against her this afternoon with a green team and in Lanier's own backyard, the Lanierites will be anxious to send the Gilmerite squad back home with a crushing defeat chalked up.

Boys' High is going to give the Poets all the help it can, however, in an effort to make it two straight. If Boys' High does win, her reputation will be made for another season.

Marist and Fulton meet in what should be the best local game of the day, and a lively game is expected. Until recently, Fulton was going strong and sweeping everything in its path. Marist dropped a game to G. M. A. some time back by as large a score as Fulton was stopped by the Gilmerite clan, but displayed a reversal of form in her trip to Cherokee and played two good games in that city. In other words, this is anybody's game.

Deatur has a game scheduled with Locust Grove tonight on the Deatur court. This will be another hot and close battle.

The Stock Just Flows In. "I hear down the river," he said, that a lot of the boys have struck it rich around Nome. A whole lot of 'em are packing up and getting out into the mountains near the Behring Sea."

We knew the man was talking straight. His one message was enough. Out of my wood money I had enough to pay my passage to St. Michaels and have thirty-five dollars left. I lost the gun for awhile."

On the boat I met up with a man named Jim White. He had come from Dawson and was of particular interest because he owned a tent.

"If I had somebody to go in with me," he said, "we could set up a place up in the Nome country and make some money."

Neither of us had enough money to start in business. We thought, though, that we could establish some kind of a public house and get started. TheNome miners were very much in need of a social center—a gathering place.

Landing at Nome beach we found that we could get a lot for $100 and we scraped up enough to get an option on it.

By that time the Behring sea had opened. While I was standing on the beach, a steamer came down to unload lumber. That gave me an idea.

"I'd like to get enough of this lumber to build a floor under our tent," he said. "Suppose you just pick out what you want and we'll make it for you. For what you use or return it later."

That was a real Bonanza. In two days we had a nice floor for our tent. We could store our stuff without its getting ruined.

Then another boat came along and began unloading a cargo of boxes containing whisky, wines and brandy. They were tumbled about the shore.

I suggested that there was enough room in my tent to store this stuff and no inconvenience.

"All right," he said. "You store this stuff and if you want to use any of it just keep tab on it and we can settle when I come back."

Prohibition Prices in 1899. Without a thought of profit, at the time, we carefully stored this liquor, feeling that we had done a fellow a good turn.

The next man I met was George Murphy. I'll never forget him because he was a salesman for a brand of cigars we all liked. This was on the 25th of June, 1899. The fact of a fortune here makes me remember the incident so well. I told Murphy we were going to open up a place; that if he would open up a little gambling so as to make the place sociable we would sell his cigars and he could take the profits out of the games—if any.

Then I thought of the stored liquor. The upshot of it was we opened our place on July 3, 1899, a big day in the social history of the Yukon.

We sold whisky at fifty cents a drink. The roulette wheel and faro bank opened under proper auspices. Miners came for miles. The woods seemed to be full of them. That was a gala day in my life.

Our gross receipts on the opening day were $937. That, mind you, for drinks alone. But the best was yet to come.

We had struck the real heartstrings of Alaska. This leads me into the excitement of the great Nome Beach strike, the heart thrills and near breaks of a gambling house on the Yukon. Many will never see the like of it again.

Crimson Tide Will Make Attempt To Take the Club Into Camp; To Start at 8:30

Tonight at 8:30 o'clock the Crimson Tide basketball team from the University of Alabama, one of the most colorful quintets in southern college circles, will tackle the strong veteran Atlanta Athletic club five on the city auditorium court.

The game tonight should result in one of the best contests scheduled in the city auditorium court this season, because of the fact that Alabama has a veteran lineup of tall rangy players and one that will make the Beane men go at their best in order to get a victory and also because of the fact that Alabama defeated the locals here last season by a small margin.

Coch Bean gave his charges probably the hardest scrimmage of the practice season thus far Wednesday night and last night a long practice drill on defense was staged on the Auburn avenue court.

The Athletic club players have not forgotten that defeat of last season in which the collegians from Tuscaloosa, Ala., were winners by a score of 34 to 24, only a 3-point margin and the locals are out for a revenge tonight.

Another reason why the game tonight should be one of the best is because it will be a rubber affair between the two, for the Atlanta Athletic club beat the Alabama five by a score of 28 to 22 two years ago and the victory for the collegians last season made the count stand one all.

So it will be seen that the two teams are more nearly evenly matched than ever before, and both teams will enter the game tonight with a veteran combination on the floor.

A comparison of the strength of the two teams is hard to make and either is liable to snatch a victory in the closing chapters of play, which will be the fastest yet seen on the local floor. Both teams are prepared to give their best from the very beginning.

As a lineup for the game Coach Bean will undoubtedly start with Captain Joe Singleton and Rufus Bass at forwards, Tom Bryan at center and Scappys Sullivan and George Ferrell at guards.

Coach Bernier will very likely start the Alabama lineup with Stabler and McNauley at forwards, Captain Carter at center and Leaks and Propert at guards.

That gives both teams a veteran combination. Every player on the Atlanta Athletic club has had several years of experience and the lineup named above played practically an entire season last year intact. Bass was started at center this year, but the forwards did not work well together and Rufus was shifted back to his regular forward position, where he and Singleton have worked nicely together thus far. Tom Bryan proved his ability as a center last Saturday night against the Vanderbilt team and was one of the main factors in winning the game.

In "Scrappy" Sullivan Coach Bean has one of the best guards in the south. Ferrell started his basketball with the A. A. C. team early last season after playing for many seasons on the fast Agona five in Y. M. C. A. circles. He is tall and an excellent man to work under the basket.

Alabama will have only one chance from that of last season. Hudson, the guard of last season, is missing from the Crimson Tide lineup, but in his place is Leaks, a letter man of last season and a veteran in basketball. Carter played a forward and center position combined last season and "Shorty" Propert alternated at the pivot position with Carter. Propert, being unusually tall, has been shifted to a regular guard position and Carter is taking care of the center position.
